Why the kitchen is the first discipline

You don't fail your goals because you're lazy. You fail because you skipped lunch, ran on sugar, and by 6 PM your prefrontal cortex went offline. Food is the infrastructure under every other habit.

This kit gives you three things:

1. A 2-hour Sunday protocol that removes every weekday food decision.
2. A plate framework that stabilizes energy without counting macros.
3. A friction-removed kitchen where the right choice is the easiest choice.

> Rules. No diet language. No "clean eating" moralizing. You're not fixing a character flaw — you're fixing a decision architecture. Every meal is one less decision you don't make at 1 PM when you're already depleted.

02 · THE FORMULA

Kitchen Discipline = Prep × Proximity × Pattern

```
PREP once (Sunday, 2h)
+ PROXIMITY (right food visible)
+ PATTERN (eat on time, not on emotion)
= zero daily food decisions

Prep means: when hunger hits, the answer already exists in a container with your name on it.

Proximity means: fruit is at eye level; snacks are in a closed cupboard. The 20-second rule — if grabbing it takes more than 20 seconds, you won't choose it when tired.

Pattern means: three meals, fixed windows. Not "when I feel like it" (that's emotional eating wearing a schedule costume). Not "whenever the meeting ends" (that's cortisol choosing your menu).

Meal Prep: the protocol

Every Sunday, 2 hours. Not cooking — assembling. Here's the exact sequence:

0:00–0:10 · Preheat oven 200°C. Boil a pot for eggs and grains.

0:10–0:35 · Sheet pan: 4 protein portions (chicken thighs, salmon, or tofu). Salt, pepper, oil. Into the oven.

0:20–0:45 · Pot: rice or quinoa (3 portions). Same water, different timing.

0:35–1:00 · Chop raw veg: peppers, broccoli, carrots. Store in glass containers with a damp paper towel.

0:45–1:10 · 8 eggs → boiled, peeled, in a sealed container. Snack insurance.

1:00–1:30 · Assemble 5 lunch boxes: grain + protein + raw veg + sauce (on the side).

1:30–2:00 · Clean as you go. Label containers. Fridge layout: lunches at eye level, snacks behind.

The one rule: if it's not in a container with a label, it doesn't exist. "I'll figure it out Wednesday" = you'll order delivery Wednesday.

Protein is not just for athletes

Most people eat carbs first (bread, rice, pasta), protein last. Result: glucose spike → crash → hungry again in 90 minutes → snack cycle.

The order that fixes it:

1. Vegetables first (fiber coats the stomach, slows absorption)
2. Protein second (satiety signal starts 15 min before you finish)
3. Carbs last (by now you're 60% full; portion self-regulates)

Daily protein target (simple):

BODY WEIGHT	MINIMUM	ACTIVE
60 kg	48 g	72 g
70 kg	56 g	84 g
80 kg	64 g	96 g
90 kg	72 g	108 g

0.8 g/kg minimum · 1.2 g/kg if you train. One chicken breast = 31 g. Two eggs = 12 g. A scoop of Greek yogurt = 10 g.

05 · HYDRATION PROTOCOL

Water before willpower

By the time you feel thirsty, you're already 1-2% dehydrated. At 2%: cognitive performance drops, irritability rises, and you reach for sugar instead of water. Most "afternoon slumps" are hydration failures, not discipline failures.

The protocol:

- ☐ 500 ml immediately upon waking (before coffee, before phone)
- ☐ 1 glass with every meal (3× daily = 750 ml extra)
- ☐ 1 bottle at your desk, refilled twice (1 L during work)
- ☐ Last glass 2 hours before bed (protect sleep, not hydration)

Total: 2–2.5 L/day minimum. More if you train, if it's hot, or if you eat high-protein.

> Anchor trick: place a full glass bottle next to the coffee maker the night before. The morning coffee anchor now triggers a water habit first. One glass before the first sip of coffee.

The plate that keeps you steady

No calorie counting. No macros. Just a visual rule every meal:

ZONE	% OF PLATE	EXAMPLES
Vegetables	50%	Any color, raw or cooked, no starch
Protein	25%	Chicken, fish, eggs, tofu, legumes
Complex carbs	25%	Rice, quinoa, sweet potato, whole wheat
Fat	Thumb-size	Olive oil, avocado, nuts, butter

Why it works: you stop deciding "what to eat" and start deciding "how to fill the zones." The plate is the system. Your brain just executes.

> Emotional eating fix: before opening the fridge, drink a glass of water and wait 10 minutes. If you're still hungry, eat. If the urge passed, it was boredom or stress — not hunger.

07 · FASTING: THE HONEST VERSION

INTERMITTENT FASTING WITHOUT THE CULT

IF IS NOT MAGIC. IT'S A TOOL THAT WORKS WHEN IT SIMPLIFIES DECISIONS. IT FAILS WHEN IT BECOMES ANOTHER THING TO WHITE-KNUCKLE.

WHEN IF HELPS:

- ☐ YOU NATURALLY SKIP BREAKFAST AND DON'T FEEL DEPRIVED
- ☐ YOU WANT FEWER MEAL DECISIONS (2 MEALS > 3 + SNACK)
- ☐ YOU'VE TRIED 16:8 FOR 2 WEEKS AND IT FEELS EASIER, NOT HARDER

WHEN IF HURTS:

- ☐ YOU BINGE AT THE EATING WINDOW (RESTRICTION → REWARD CYCLE)
- ☐ YOU TRAIN FASTED AND PERFORMANCE DROPS 20%+
- ☐ YOU'RE USING IT TO PUNISH YESTERDAY'S EATING

> THE DISCIPLINE VERSION: EAT WITHIN A CONSISTENT 10-HOUR WINDOW (E.G., 8 AM – 6 PM). NO FOOD OUTSIDE. THAT'S IT. NO 16:8 HEROICS. THE PATTERN MATTERS MORE THAN THE PROTOCOL.

Fuel before willpower

Decision fatigue is glucose depletion. Every choice you make — what to wear, what to answer, what to work on — draws from the same tank. If you haven't eaten, the tank is empty by 3 PM.

The 3-2-1 rule:

1. 3 meals at roughly fixed times (± 45 min). Not 2, not 5. Three.
2. 2 snacks max if training or the gap between meals exceeds 5 hours.
3. 1 thing you never do: make an important decision hungry. Eat first. Then decide.

> Practical anchor: set a silent alarm at 12:30 and 19:00. Not "lunchtime" — a specific time. The alarm is the anchor; eating is the stack. This removes the "I'll eat when I finish this email" lie that becomes "it's 4 PM and I had crackers."

09 · WEEKLY TEMPLATE

7-day meal stack

Copy this. Adjust protein source. The structure stays fixed; the content rotates.

DAY	BREAKFAST (8 AM)	LUNCH (12:30)	DINNER (19:00)
Mon	2 eggs + fruit + coffee	Prep box: rice + chicken + broccoli	Salmon + sweet potato + salad
Tue	Greek yogurt + nuts	Prep box: quinoa + tofu + peppers	Stir-fry + rice + veg
Wed	Oats + banana	Prep box: pasta + tuna + tomato	Grilled chicken + roasted veg
Thu	2 eggs + toast	Prep box: rice + chicken + broccoli	Omelette + salad + avocado
Fri	Smoothie (protein + fruit)	Prep box: quinoa + chickpeas + veg	Free choice (restaurant ok)
Sat	Pancakes + eggs	Whatever's left in prep boxes	Cook something new (experiment)
Sun	Slow breakfast	Light (prep day = grazing)	First meal of next week's prep

> Friday/Saturday flexibility is built in. A system that doesn't allow for life breaks by day 10. The weekday structure protects the weekend freedom, not the other way around.

5 kitchen tools worth the investment

TOOL	WHY	PRICE
Glass containers (×5)	Prep boxes; microwave safe; visible = chosen	€20-30
Digital scale (0.1 g)	Protein accuracy; kills "eyeballing" errors	€12-20
Large chef knife	Faster chopping → less prep friction	€25-50
Insulated bottle (750 ml)	Visible hydration anchor at desk	€15-25
Blender (personal)	Smoothie = 90-second breakfast on bad days	€40-80

🛒 KITCHEN TOOL · Victorinox 20 cm chef knife (buy once, never replace): amazon.fr/s?k=victorinox+chef+knife

> Do NOT buy: air fryer (unless you already cook — it's a shortcut, not a system), juicer (smoothie > juice; fiber matters), or 10-piece "meal prep kit" from AliExpress (they crack in 2 weeks; buy 5 good glass containers instead).
